Murder for the Truth?

Edwin Williamson

A true account of jealousy and resentment; unfettered power, humiliation, murder and suicide in deepest Wiltshire.

"We are now being told that the British people are not capable of judging the issue - the top people are the only people who understand it. This is the classic argument of every tyranny in history. It begins as a refined intellectual argument and it moves into a one-man dictatorship. We did not win the political battles of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries to have this reactionary nonsense thrust upon us again."

Hugh Gaitskell MP, Labour Party Conference, October 1962

"Millions of people in this country will feel, as I do, that legislation passed this way, with no consent, cannot command the assent of the country and would lack moral and constitutional validity."

Douglas Jay, Anti-Marketeer and Labour MP for Battersea North, during the second reading of the European Communities Bill, 1972.

"We seek an amicable divorce from a political European Union and its replacement by a genuine free trade agreement which is what we thought we signed up to in the first place."

Nigel Farage MEP, UKIP, October 2001.

"They're not listening to us."

A Voter, Oxford, June 2004.
